NEW SOUTH WALES
A COUNTRY RICH IN MINERALS.
Practically all the valuable minerals are found in New South Wales. The mine output of this young Australian state has totaled to date, $100,000,000 in value. Of this amount gold has contributed over $300,000,000, silver and copper, $120,000,000, lead, $100,000,000. The state produces molibdenite, antimony, bismuth, tungsten, aluminite, and precious stones. There are vast deposits of shale, rich in petroleum, and sufficient quantities of every kind of stone for building and for ornamental purposes. Plenty of fine opportunities for business development await the investor and the enterprising.
